The Corn Crop.

The farmers are perplexed to know what to do with their corn crops. Stock hogs are very high and feeding cattle cannot consume a tithe of it. Some are going to put it in the shuck and keep it over a year.—Lexington Gazette.

NO RAIN SINCE MAY.

Water is Selling at Twenty-Five Cents a barrel.

Winchester, O., Aug. 6.—This section of the State is experiencing one of the most severe droughts in many years. Except a few light rains there has been no rains here since May, the creeks being dry and pasture fields bare. Corn is beginning to wilt and die, while potatoes will not yield over half a crop. Water is being hauled and sold at twenty-five cents a barrel because of a scarcity in wells and cisterns.

Bicycles. Webster's Dictionary, Etc., Free.

What's free? Yes, full particulars can be found in that sterling magazine, Good Housekeeping, of Springfield, Mass. The publishers will send a sample copy containing particulars for 20 cents.

Big Sentence.

Hays Williams, the colored prisoner who escaped from the workhouse and was captured in Lincoln county, was taken before Judge Prewitt Wednesday afternoon and his sentence multiplied ten fold, which makes it 570 days instead of 57. Hays is a very bad egg and will be hard to hold.—Danville Advocate.

DEAD.

JUSTICE HOWELL E. JACKSON

Of the United States Supreme Court,

Passes Away at His Home in Tennessee.

Associate Justice Howell Edmund Jackson, of the Supreme Court of the United States, died on Thursday afternoon at his home, West Meade, six miles from Nashville, Tennessee. Judge Jackson had been in failing health for the past four years, but it has been only in the past eight or nine months that the progress of his disease began to cause his family and friends uneasiness. Last year he went on a lengthy trip to the far West in search of health. Later he went to Thomasville, Ga., where it was hoped that the mild and yet bracing climate would restore his once-tireless vigor. The trip did him little good, and after a time he was brought home. At his old home Judge Jackson seemed to improve slightly until he went to Washington to sit in the second hearing of the income tax case.

Justice Jackson has been steadily failing since his return from Washington, though he seemed to stand the strain of the sitting of the Court fairly well. It was not till Wednesday of the week before his death that he was compelled to give up and take to his bed. Since then his physicians and family recognized that the end was near at hand. The dead Justice had been a severe sufferer for some time past with a drooping affection that while medical skill and change of climate seemed to relieve somewhat, neither could offer any permanent cure.

Howard Edmunds Jackson was born in Paris, Tenn., April 8th, 1832, so that he was in his 63rd year at the time of his death. Justice Jackson was a classical scholar, graduating from the West Tennessee College in 1858.

He studied law two years at the University of Virginia and at Jackson, under his kinsmen, Judges A. W. O. Totten and Milton Brown, graduated from the Lebanon law school in 1856 in which year he located at Jackson and engaged in the practice of his profession; removed to Memphis in 1859, where he continued the practice of the law; served on the Supreme bench by appointment on two occasions, and was once a prominent candidate for Supreme Judge before the nominating convention; relocated in Jackson in 1876; was elected to the State House of Representatives in 1880 on the State credit platform; was elected to the United States Senate as Democrat in 1881, and served until April 12, 1886; was appointed United States Circuit Judge by President Cleveland and nominated for associate Judge by President Harrison; was confirmed by the Senate February 18, 1893, and entered the duties of that office March 4, 1894.

NEUT LANE.

Wounds Col. H. C. Rodenbaugh and Kills His Son, James.

In a Difficulty at Versailles, Kentucky.

On Monday of last week, W. Newton Lane, who is well known to all our people, shot and wounded Col. H. C. Rodenbaugh and almost instantly killed his son, James, in a difficulty at Col. Rodenbaugh's hotel in Versailles. It seems Lane had been on a spree and coming to Versailles proposed to go out to his sisters, Mrs. Robert McConnell's, a few miles distant, but was persuaded to sober up before he visited her. To this end, he went to a room in the hotel and slept for some hours. When he awoke, Lane came down to the office, and while settling with the proprietor became involved in a difficulty with him. Lane claimed the room was filthy and the proprietor denied the charge. Lane became abusive and Rodenbaugh struck him one or more times, and the son hoaring the scuffle ran to his father's assistance. As young Rodenbaugh came in the shooting began and when it was over the younger man was dead and the father so badly hurt that his life was despaired of. Lane was unhurt, save for some bruises about the head and face. Rodenbaugh is very popular and the killing created intense feeling against Lane, who, for safe keeping, was removed to Lexington. Newton Lane comes of a good family and is connected to some of the best people in the country. Of late he has been going all the gaits and since several of his escapes have been in and around Lexington, he has managed to create against himself a vast amount of prejudice. His trial is set for August 23.

When last heard from Col. Rodenbaugh was still alive and the prospect for him to get, to some extent, over his wounds was brightening.

KILLED

By The Explosion of a Boiler.

Three Men Suddenly Ushered Into Eternity, and a Fourth Badly Wounded.

Yesterday morning about 9 o'clock the boiler of a saw mill belonging to John Hines exploded with terrific force, sending three men into eternity in the twinkling of an eye, and badly wounding a fourth.

The mill was located on Clay Lick, in this county, at the discontiguous postoffice, Monta View, near Salem Church and very near the Montgomery and Menefee line. The kill was John Hines, the owner of the mill, and is grown son, Butler, and the fireman, Frank Smith.

A. J. Downs, one of the workmen about the mill, was struck on the leg and badly cut by a piece of the exploded boiler. Hines' body was literally blown to pieces, parts of it being picked up as much as eighty yards from the mill.

It seems the inspirator was out of order and Smith was working on it, while the older Hines was filing the saw. Smith was so long in getting the inspirator to work that Hines became uneasy and went over to him, and just as he reached the boiler gave way.

Judge J. J. Byrns and Hon. J. H. Williams, of Frenchburg, came down and sent Undertaker George C. Eastin up to take charge of and bury the three bodies.

Ray Moss took his gelding, Beauty, to the Sharpsburg fair and made a show in the harness ring and sold him to partisans at Cynthiana before the harness was removed.

A PRACTICAL JOKE.

Editor Moffett, of the Cincinnati Tribune,

The Victim of Brother News paper Men of Cincinnati,

Who Had Him Arrested as a Fraud.

"Mr. J. C. Moffett, night editor of the Cincinnati Tribune, was last night made the butt of a practical joke at the Phoenix Hotel, in this city, which his fellow newspaper men had arranged for his entertainment. He was spending the night en route to High Bridge, and after registering at the Phoenix had retired at about 10:30 o'clock. At 1:30 o'clock a message was received at Police headquarters from Cincinnati stating that a man representing himself as J. C. Moffett had come to Lexington, but was a fraud and badly wanted there, and to hold him until further orders. Officer Stough immediately went to the hotel and after a few minutes conference with Mr. Davidson, the night clerk, was shown to the room of the sleeping editor.

"He was awakened and on coming to the door was shown the telegram editorizing his arrest and detention. Editor Moffett became almost beside himself with fright on hearing it read, and with great beads of perspiration standing out on his forehead, he proceeded to tell his history from his birth and show letters and credentials by the score to prove his innocence of any crime.

"About the time Mr. Moffett had gotten into his clothes and was ready to accompany the officer to the station house, a messenger boy arrived at the hotel with a second message, which stated that the whole affair was only a joke and asking that no further proceedings be taken.

"Mr. Moffett took the joke very good-naturedly, declared that the treats were on him and bade the gentlemen goodnight."—Lexington Transcript.

Editor Moffett is the man who was so demoralized during the term of the February Court here, by Judge Cooper's order to the grand jury to take charge of the scribe for writing in a somewhat disrespectful manner of His Honor. Moffett was so scared that he walked five miles out to take the train, and so effectively hid himself from the irate Judge's threatened vengeance that even his paper could not get track of him for several days.

Montgomery's Legal Hanging.

Unless Governor Brown should interfere, which is not likely, John Johnson, colored, will be hanged at the place on Friday. The crime for which Johnson is to suffer is the killing of Policeman Charles Evans on the night of Saturday, June 16, 1895. The murder was a villainous one and Johnson is only getting his just deserts in having the death penalty voted out to him. His record all his life long has been a bad one, and he had only been out of the penitentiary a few weeks when he had served time for malicious cutting, when he drew the shot that is to send him to the gallows.

It is said he had remarked to some of his chums upon being released from the pen: "I will be back in a few weeks if they don't hang me before I can get here."

If Montgomery county will not full justice to some of her white criminals, as well as to the negro toughs, our reputation for law and order will rapidly rise with our friends on every side.

LAST CHANCE FOR EIGHT YEARS.

Why 1900 Won't be One in Which the Women can Propose.

Pope Gregory So Decreed and English Law Affirmed It.

Women Folks Will Have to Make the Best Use of Their Time.

OLD AND NEW SYSTEMS.

Women must make the best use of their time possible in the enjoyment of the special privileges accorded to them during the leap year of 1896, inasmuch as they will lack another opportunity until 1904, eight years later. The maiden of 17 can hardly hesitate by reason of her youthfulness; she will be twenty-five before she can again usurp man's privilege and do the wooing, says the New York Herald.

The expectant spinster must make every effort for next year's struggle; eight years more would render her hopelessly passé. Indeed, the prospect is sad from the feminine point of view, unless the coming century usher in the active reality of woman's alleged rights; in such case it will be, and even sadder, for man. Centuries are so long that men and women forgot that the regulation of our calendar requires every hundredth year—although divisible by four—not to be a leap year. It was settled years ago, when the final changes in the calendar were made, and to understand that no enmity against women was intended an understanding of the methods of reckoning the year is necessary.

The primeval system of reckoning time was based on the moon's changes, as is shown in our word "month." By the ruling of the moon months were reckoned with either twenty-nine or thirty days. Soon the ratio of the seasons was made to serve as a standard. It soon appeared, however, that the two systems did not fully agree.

It was then that it was found necessary to invent some means of adjustment. One of the earliest means devised was that in using the Egyptian calendar, General Gage, and demanding that their privilege to coast on the Common be not denied them by British redcoats? Who has not heard ring in his ears the cheers and joyous outcries of victory with which these ladies dragged their sleds from under the very feet of their oppressive tyrants? What if Parliament at home censured Gage for his legacy? What if he did proscriber Samuel Adams and John Hancock? The true American boy always will have a kindly feeling for the Viscount's son who applauded the bold stand for personal liberty.

Small things, as well as great, history repeats itself. It is useless to look askance at valor and patriotism as departing qualities. The boys of Allendale, N. J., have just treated us to an exhibition of this. They are not to be sat upon by a few foggies who imagine the proper place for youth is in a sandbox. Not a bit of it! They are not built that way. These foggies, having prevailed upon the mayor of the borough to prohibit the boys from playing baseball in the Allendale public park, a committee of ladies appeared in protest before the council hall, and they argue their case that the councilmen passed a resolution permitting ball playing to go on as of yore.

The ancient Greeks made their year consist of twelve lunar months, but Solon in 594 made a law for the Athenians that the month should comprise twenty-nine and thirty days, with the addition of an intercalary period occasionally. Afterward three times in eight years a month of thirty days was added, by which means the average length of each year was made to be 364 days. Ancient Rome had but ten months in the year, but in the time of King Augustus the year was introduced, numbering 355 days in the twelve months, an occasional intercalary month being employed to make the necessary additions. The Roman system of computing time, however, was beset with many difficulties, and the gross ignorance of the priests caused them to commit innumerable blunders in their reckoning, until chronology was hopelessly confused.

Julius Caesar, in the year 46 B. C., devised the calendar which bears his name. In his system the year had 365 days, save every fourth, which had 366, making the average about 365. Exactly reckoned, the year was made up of 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 10 seconds, or 11 minutes and 10 seconds less than 365. Caesar gave also the current number of days to the months, and his calendar as a whole was so excellent and its errors were so slight that it was generally adopted.

Until the year 1582 A. D., no change was made in it, but by that time the 11 minutes and 10 seconds of error in each year had grown to ten complete days. As a result the time of Easter was shifted from its true place and all the movable feasts of the church, which are reckoned from it, were thrown out of the proper order. To remedy the resultant annoyances Pope Gregory XIII, ordered that October 5, 1582, should be reckoned as October 15, 1582. To guard against a recurrence of the trouble Pope Gregory also decreed that every hundredth year should not be a leap year, save every four hundredth, but that exception beginning only at 2000 A. D. The excellence of Gregory's device is obvious, since a brief computation shows that the total discrepancy by his calendar would amount to no more than one day in 5,000 years.

Italy, Spain and Portugal unhesitatingly followed the P. P.'s direction; France made the change in the same year, in December instead of October as did also the Low Countries. The Protestants, in the fury of the Reformation refused to make any such change, and persisted in refusing until 1700, when the Lutherans of Germany and Switzerland adopted the new system. By that time the continuation of the old error made it necessary to make a change of eleven days instead of ten. Scotland adopted the system in 1600. England refused to yield until 1751. When the bill was first introduced it failed, but prejudice was not able to totally destroy common sense, wherefore, 24 George II, 1751 made the calendar of Great Britain and Ireland to agree with the Gregorian. Russia, Greece, Romania and the like races yet retain the old method, as a result of which, when one sends a letter from one of these countries to some region where the calendar has been corrected it must be doubly dated, as, for example, in this fashion, there being twelve days' difference now; January 1-13, or June 20, July 2.

Not one of the least remarkable features of the century year is that it leaves those unhappy mortals to whom something happened on February 29 without their anniversary for eight years.

The Right Sons of Boys.

Dear to the heart of American citizens is the natural right of protest. Who does not remember the thrill of patriotic emotion that stirred his soul when, as a lad, he read of the boys of Loxton, in the stern English soldier, General Gage, and demanding that their privilege to coast on the Common be not denied them by British redcoats? Who has not heard ring in his ears the cheers and joyous outcries of victory with which these ladies dragged their sleds from under the very feet of their oppressive tyrants? What if Parliament at home censured Gage for his legacy? What if he did proscriber Samuel Adams and John Hancock? The true American boy always will have a kindly feeling for the Viscount's son who applauded the bold stand for personal liberty.

Small things, as well as great, history repeats itself. It is useless to look askance at valor and patriotism as departing qualities. The boys of Allendale, N. J., have just treated us to an exhibition of this. They are not to be sat upon by a few foggies who imagine the proper place for youth is in a sandbox. Not a bit of it!

They are not built that way. These foggies, having prevailed upon the mayor of the borough to prohibit the boys from playing baseball in the Allendale public park, a committee of ladies appeared in protest before the council hall, and they argue their case that the councilmen passed a resolution permitting ball playing to go on as of yore.

From such youths as these good men are made. They do not fly it in the face of law and its enforcement. They appreciate the fact that such vandalism is an entering wedge to anarchy. It laws and ordinances do not suit them, they seek by honest efforts to bring about a change. These are the right sort of boys, and he who runs can read the lesson which the teach.—New York Press.

Farmers from over the county do not give the most encouraging reports about the tobacco crop prospects. In a few localities the crop is in splendid condition, but as a general thing the plants are small. With the corn crop it is different. Reports from every section of the country say the prospects for an immense yield were never better.

It pays to raise potato onions. Farmers who say they do not make their salt on tobacco would do well to follow the example of a man in Louis, who raised sixty-seven bushels of potato onions, and 500 gallons of sets on less than half an acre of ground. At price ruling last spring, which were lower than for many years, the crop would bring $100. The seed cost about $10, planting, working and harvesting $15—a total of $80, leaving clear $110 for forty-five hundred of an acre.—Louisville Post.

UNIVERSAL PAPER

May be Published Simultaneously In Different Cities.

Typeetting by Telegraph
And it is Ready for The Press.

Telegraphic reproduction of electric types for newspaper printing is the latest achievement of electric invention. The invention is very remarkable, and consists in the transferring and reproducing of exactly similar newspapers in different cities by telegraph. A blank paper, can by the use of this machine, appear in all the larger cities of Germany at the same hour in the morning without being sent through the mails. The inventors claim for their apparatus not only increasing rapidity, but they say also that it will reduce the cost of printing. The inventors and patentees, Messrs. C. Moray-Horvath and C. Boar at Graz, describe the working of the apparatus as follows:

The copy is first of all run off on a typewriter, next to the typewriter copy, which serves as corrector/spool, a special attachment releases a narrow strip of silvered paper, which is covered by a number of short strokes and dots constituting an alphabet peculiar to this machine. These strokes and dots are made by means of a chemical fluid, which so changes the metallic surface of the paper that it becomes non-conductive. Any corrections becoming necessary can be made on the strip of silver paper; insertion or cutting out of copy is also easily performed. After being edited and corrected, the long strip of silver paper is rolled up on a spool, and inserted into a telegraphic apparatus, which when set in motion, will reproduce the same strokes and dots in similar silver paper at any distance, and in any number of apparatus connected at the same time. These strips of silvered paper are placed into the "Electric Typograph." The strip passes through six points of electric contact covering the entire width of the metallic surface. This typograph operates in such a way that the steel type representing each character is impressed upon a prepared card board in the proper order. An automatic mechanism provides for the varying width of the type, for the spacing and alignment, and for the moving of the card board at the end of the line. The card board fully covered with characters represents one solid column of copy, and is ready for the electrotypes. As compared with the type-setting machines now in use this apparatus gives the advantage of correcting and editing the entire copy from typewritten proofsheets. The inventors claim for the typograph that it will do the work of eight expert typesetters and save two-thirds of the cost of setting up the copy by hand.—Louisville Post.

Winter Oats.

Winter Oats are one of the best paying crops that can be grown. Whether introduced they are superseeded spring oats entirely. Oats are essentially a cool weather crop, and failure either partial or total with spring oats, on account of the hot, dry weather of June and July, are so common that many farmers are entirely discouraged from growing them. This trouble is entirely obviated by substituting winter oats. They are sown at the same time a winter wheat, and ripen with when the following season, so that the harvesting and threshing may all be done at the same time. The variety we grow in Deleware is perfectly hardy—as much so as Fultz wheat—and notwithstanding the severest weather perfectly. On good soil a yield of 50 to 80 bushels is common. They grow a strong, stiff straw, which stand up well. They are a very heavy oat, a measured bushel weighing from 38 to 45 lbs. I have known crops of these oats this season that gave an average of 80 bushels per acre on 20 to 30 acres fields. One and a half bushels per acre are enough to sow. Winter oats are also a good crop to seed clover with. The same fertilization and tillage that will produce a good wheat crop will give a big crop of winter oats.—American Agriculturist.

A Leather Gun.

An surprising test was made at the Sandy Hook grounds, Tuesday. The cannon on which the members of the ordinance board experimented was made of rawhide with a core of steel and an outer wrapping of copper wire. It is the invention of a Frenchman, one Frederick La Tulip, who lives in Syracuse. The opinion expressed by those who saw the test—from a very safe distance—was that Tulip was a daisy. The inventor has made a boat and other things of leather, and he has now made a gun that has stood remarkable strain. It is five feet eight inches long, and is mounted on a home made gun carriage. Its weight is only 456 pounds, a considerable part of that probably lying in the steel core which is 2 of an inch thick at the muzzle and 1½ inches thick at the breech. The officers had never seen or fired a gun like it, and they all placed sand and distance between themselves and the implement when it was fired. The gunner used a lever about 150 feet long and stood behind a bank. When the order was given to fire all hands ducked and lay low for some seconds after the report, for it was believed the gun would not last. To the surprise of all the cannon had endured a strain of 2½ tons to the square inch. This strain was increased by heavier charges of powder until it had gone up to 30,360 pounds to the inch, at which point it broke from its carriage with the recoil. Two balls of 2½ inch diameter were fired in each of the latter tests.

The durability of the endurance of the gun is due to its elasticity. Officers in the army will scoff at the invention, of course, and say there is nothing in it. Everything new has been derided by those who knew it could not succeed, and when it has succeeded they have fallen into line with the majority very reluctantly. It is, of course, too early to say exactly what value the new gun may have in actual war; but it has demonstrated two decided advantages, it is light and it stays cool. If it can be fitted to a carriage that will enable it to resist the recoil inevitable in a light gun under a heavy charge, it can be used for coast defense and maritime artillery, it would seem, and with lighter charges it would have a decided advantage over the field guns now in use, in that it would be easier to move about.

It may be that the officers will succeed in bursting the new pieces, although if they do so they will accomplish no more than they might do with many of the brass or steel weapons. But a principle seems to have been discovered that may lead to extensive changes in artillery. If muzzle-loading gun of raw hide can endure such a test as that of Tuesday it is not too much to believe that a larger gun of the same material, constructed under the direction of army engineers and made for breach loading, should accomplish still greater wonders.

It may be incidentally remarked that leather guns are not new; nor wooden ones; nor Quaker guns, for that matter. Wooden cannons were in use in the Civil War and wooden canons bound with iron hoops, have been employed, for lack of better, in emergencies. Something has been born from aluminum, that being lighter than steel and free from rust, but it is liable to bond and a gun with a dent in it would become more dangerous to the man who fired it than to the enemy. Perhaps one of these days we shall have a gun made of paper. They are making car wheels and other things of it that have to endure weight and strain, and guns may be the next development.—Brooklyn Eagle.

A Born Diplomat.

Charley was caught napping on the porch of the summer resort. A pair of soft little hands covered his eyes, and a sweet voice commanded:

"Guess who it is?" Nothing very dreadful for Charley you think; but then you don't know that Charley was engaged to two girls, and for the life of him, couldn't decide which voice it was, which made it a very embarrassing situation for Charley. A wrong guess would lead to complications awful to think of. But a happy thought inspired Charley, and he announced:

"It's the dearest, sweetest little girl in all the world."

"Oh, how lovely boy!" gurgled the satisfied one as she removed her little hands.

And now Charley thinks of applying for a foreign ministry, feeling that his talents would be wasted in any other than diplomatic field.—Ex.
